

TINLEY FARMER KILLED BY WAGON

August Panknin Fatally Hurt In Fall Under Moving Vehicle

August Panknin, aged 64 years residing on the old Moak farm north east of Tinley Park met with a tragic death Wednesday morning when he suffered crushing injuries when a wagon wheel passed over his body.

According to the story told, Mr. Panknin had purchased a new horse recently and had hitched it with another horse to a hay rack wagon. He had tied a rope to the new horse and had another man on the wagon driving while he walked alongside the wagon holding onto the rope while the empty wagon was being headed toward a field for a load of hay.

In some unaccountable manner Mr. Panknin either stumbled or was jerked off his feet by the horse and fell under the wagon and one of the hind wagon wheels passed over his body inflicting fatal internal injuries and he died within a few minutes.

John Fellouris, a neighbor was called and arrived just as Mr. Panknin was breathing his last.

He is survived by his widow and a number of relatives and a host of friends. Mr. Panknin was a kindly man and highly esteemed by those who knew him.

Funeral services will be held Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the Tinley Park Methodist church with Rev. L. E. Weinreich will officiate.

Protests Against Village Flooding Farm Land

Fred Yunker whose farm is located south of Mokena has been taking village storm sewer water on his farm land for many years, but of late Mr. Yunker told the Mokena village board at their meeting Wednesday night, there has been a larger amount of water flowing on his farm land than usual and he asked the board to remedy the situation by installing 18 inch tiles to carry the water off.

Mokena Plays Barr Senators Sunday

"Pat" Homerding will pitch against the Barrs Sunday which should be a good game as he pitched a two hit game against the strong Trop Merchants last Thursday night and won the game by the score of 2 to 1. With Homerding in top form and two new players Bornet and Van Bauren on the team the Orioles have a good chance of beating the Barrs. Come out fans and watch a good ball game this Sunday.

Great Crowd At Band Picnic

Several thousand people attended the picnic sponsored by the bands of Tinley Park, Frankfort and Mokena last Sunday in the Frankfort Grove. The weather being ideal, the grove was thronged all afternoon and evening. Every bit of parking space on the grounds was filled and cars were then parked along Keane avenue for half a mile on east side of the grove.

The dance floor was so crowded that there was hardly any room to dance.

The refreshment stands did a thriving business and were completely sold out at the close of the festivities.

The evening's program closed with a gorgeous display of fireworks. This was one of the most successful picnics the band associations have yet held.

Repair Bad Water Leak

A bad water leak on Front street in front of the Grothendick place has caused a large amount of water to be wasted. Water pumper, August Hentsch reported to the Mokena village board at their session Wednesday evening that he was obliged to run the village pump day and night in order to keep water in the village water tower. Thursday morning the water committee of the village board had the leak repaired.

DEDICATION OF CEMETERY SITE IMPRESSIVE

A very colorful parade and ceremony marked the dedication of the name of the "Pioneer Memorial" cemetery at Mokena under the auspices of the Mokena Garden Club last Sunday noon.

The line of march formed at the Rock Island depot headed by the color guard of the Chicago Board of Trade American Legion Post No. 304. Following this came the firing squad of the American Legion, Mayors Harry F. Mall of Mokena, and Frank Allemon of Matteson, members of the Mokena village board Rehfeldt-Meyer Post No. 474 of the American Legion at Matteson, their Ladies Auxiliary, Veterans of Foreign Wars and their Ladies Auxiliary of Lincoln Estates Post No. 725 President R. A. Bechstein and members of the Civic Club, Mokena Fire Department, Mokena Grade School band, Mokena PTA and Mokena Garden Club.

Arriving at the Memorial Cemetery site, an improvised platform decorated with bunting was located back of the new flagpole. The program was opened with Rev. Theodore Hafele of the St. John Evangelical church offering the invocation.

Mayor Harry F. Mall presided as master of ceremonies.

He presented the flag to Mrs. Anton Benson for the Garden Club and on behalf of the club Mrs. Benson thanked Mayor Mall and accepted the gift with appropriate remarks.

The flag was raised by Mrs. Benson and Mrs. Albert Braun.

Mr. Pazano, head bugler of the Chicago Board of Trade American Legion Post played taps with Howard Strom, director of the Mokena band answering.

The Matteson American Legion Post and their Ladies Auxiliary dedicated the flag pole. Commander Elliott of the Matteson Post made a very pleasing dedicatory address dedicating the pole and flag.

The color bearers of the Rehfeldt-Meyer Legion Post were: Jacob Depo and Harry Bruns. Color guards were: Arthur Schwingendorf and Edward Mann. Color bearers of the Ladies Auxiliary of this post were: Mrs. Fred Galetz and Mrs. Wesley Anderson.

A wreath of flowers was placed at the base of the pole by Mrs. Fred Rauch, vice-president of the Mokena Garden Club.

Mayor Frank Allemon of Matteson made a very timely address regarding the three soldiers buried in the Memorial Cemetery and in the course of his remarks showed how the democracies of Europe are tottering and that we of this great republic should always consider and guard our priceless heritage left to us by the founders of our nation and he further pointed out that it is up to the people of America to decide whether they want to remain free and equal or be slaves of some dictator like we see in the totalitarian states.

Editor Wm. Semmler who had suggested the name for the cemetery gave the following address:

When the early settlers first came westward and set foot in this territory in the early 30's, they made provisions for schools and churches and also provided a special parcel of land to be set aside for a final resting place of their loved ones.

Thus it was that the Denny family numbered among the early settlers and who were prominent in the life of their community in their day and who owned considerable land in this locality, set aside this plot of ground on which we are gathered for a local cemetery.

The dates on the tombstones here go back to the forties, but there is one grave which is even older, that of Chas. Denny, a revolutionary war soldier. For many years the history of this patriot of Washington's day was shrouded in obscurity. Thru the efforts and diligent search of the records of the library of the society "The Sons of the American Revolution," by attorney Chas. B. Elder of Mokena and a past state officer of this Society, a very interesting historical sketch of the soldier was revealed. Mr. Denny was born in Pauldingtown, Duchess County New York, December 25, 1759. When the revolutionary war broke out he rallied to the call of independence and in the summer of 1777 he enlisted in the Continental Army and served for nine months under captains Noah Wheeler, Seth Wheeler with Col. Roswell Hopkins in the New York troops. Later he came to Will County, settling near Joliet

Board Receives Resolution On Dangerous Buildings

A resolution from the Mokena Civic Club was read at the Mokena village board meeting Wednesday night asking the board to employ council to determine what can be done to eliminate buildings in the village which are considered fire hazards as well as a menace to health.

Mayor Harry F. Mall suggested the village clerk write to the Illinois Municipal League of which the village board is a member, for information regarding the matter complained of.

where he died August 6, 1839 and was buried in this cemetery.

This hallowed spot continued to be used for a burial ground for many years. At the close of the Civil War two veterans of the Union Army who had fought to preserve the Union and free the slaves, also passed on to the Great Beyond.

They were Henry Brill and Abraham Evans, but no history of these men has been found and no marker was ever placed on their graves so their exact location in this cemetery cannot be determined.

With the passing of the years down the dim corridors of time, relatives and friends of the persons buried here, either located in other parts of the country or also passed away until finally there was no one left who was interested enough to keep the graves and grave site in a good state of preservation and the old cemetery was soon forgotten and the memory of those sleeping here became shrouded in obscurity.

Brush, weeds, and a mass of tangled grape vines and underbrush soon over ran the place. Nature however, did not quite forget the dead, as many wild flowers sprang up to decorate the mounds of old settler and soldier alike.

This scene of desolation continued for many years. Time and again patriotic citizens and village boards would cut down the weeds and brush, but nothing was done to perpetuate the memory of those resting here.

It was only recently that the Mokena Garden Club imbued with the idea of beautifying their community turned their attention to this cemetery and decided to make it a memorial in tribute to the memory of the citizens of the long ago and of the patriots buried here.

After interesting town and village officials in their plan to reclaim this spot, the Garden Club succeeded in having the weeds, brush, etc. removed and raised stones which had fallen on the graves and had been overgrown with grass for years.

Now that the task of restoring this plot to a neat appearance has gotten underway, the Garden Club felt that it would be the proper thing to make this burial ground a memorial park and that it should have a name to designate it as such.

After much consideration it was decided that this hallowed spot should be henceforth be known as "THE PIONEER MEMORIAL CEMETERY" and at this time I have the honor and privilege and now I therefore dedicate the name of this spot to be "THE PIONEER MEMORIAL CEMETERY." And it should stand as a tribute to those who have gone on before and also as a reminder to generations yet to come of the early pioneer and the patriots who fought for our independence and the preservation of our Union.

Following a salute fired by the Firing Squad of the Chicago Board of Trade Legion Post, there was a period of silence following which the allegiance to the flag was given, led by Russell Bennett of Mokena. The program closed with the band playing the "Star Spangled Banner" and the benediction by Rev. Theo. Hafele.

At the close of the ceremonies the visiting guests and those on the program were invited to the Benson home. Here eats and cooling drinks were served on the pretty and spacious lawn.

Americanism Is Stressed At Marley 4th of July Picnic

Fourth of July morning started out rather gloomy and with a slight rain fall, but later the sun came out and the day turned out to be alright after all.

As a result of the stormy outlook of the weather, the Marley patriotic program in the Storm's grove was delayed for an hour, but the large audience gathered in the beautiful natural outdoor stage setting, was more than amply repaid by the very fine program rendered.

The feature was "Our American Album" which was written by Mrs. Ward Bush, and brought out a very stirring lesson to be applied to our present day conditions existing in this nation and abroad.

The idea conveyed was that democracy is not a system of government but a way of life. We know what it's all about. Emphasis was laid on the fact that we should protect it and that this is no time to gamble with our birthright because of some tribal quarrel 3000 miles away. It was also made plain that if we get into this thing we will lose what we have. The futile sacrifice America made during the world war to make the world safe for democracy was forcefully demonstrated in a pantomime. The main thought conveyed was to keep for ourselves out of this country, keep what we have, let's mind our own business and keep our powder dry.

The Mokena grade school furnished the band music. A loud speaker system carried the program to all parts of the grove and was much appreciated.

This was the 57th annual Fourth of July picnic and program observed in Marley.

Many parts of American early history acted out in costume.

Much credit is due Mrs. Ward Bush who wrote the libretto and to all who co-laborated with her in making the affair the big success it was.

Mokena Water Pumper Re-hired

August Hentsch who has served as village water pumper at the Mokena pumping station for the past 15 years, was re-appointed for another year by the Mokena village board at their monthly meeting Wednesday night. Howard Beagley also sought the appointment as village pumper when he heard a report that Mr. Hentsch was going to resign. When one of the board members suggested that the board advertise for bids for this job, Mr. Hentsch said he would not put in a bid and would quit right then and there, leaving the pumping job without an operator. Mr. Hentsch said he would take the job again for another year at the same salary he has been receiving namely $35 a month. Mr. Beagley said that he did not want to appear as trying to take the job away from Mr. Hentsch and withdrew his application.

Elmira McGovney Named Mokena Village Treasurer

Miss Elmira McGovney was appointed village treasurer of the village of Mokena by the village board at their meeting Wednesday night. Arthur Schoop also had a petition for the same office, but the board after taking a secret ballot voted in favor of Miss McGovney.

She has filled this office since the death of her brother Erwin last spring. He had held this office since last August filling the vacancy caused by the death of his father Ona E. McGovney.

Another prospective applicant for this office backed out when he heard that Miss McGovney was seeking the office.

These fares are cheaper than one could drive an auto to Chicago for

Street Improvement Work Begun

Mokena's long awaited street improvement program has gotten underway. The streets are being scarified preparatory to being given a top dressing of stone, rolled and then oiled. The streets should be in a very good shape after this work is completed the cost of which is being met by the gas tax money due the village from the state gas tax allotment, the share of Mokena being about $1500.

Sealed bids for hauling stone, applying oil, etc., will be received by the village board up to 7:30 p. m. daylight saving time July 19, 1939 at the Mokena village hall. The village board reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

Must Use Approved Meters

The water committee of the Mokena village board has discovered that a number of property owners and water users in the village have been installing what is termed "orphan" water meters, meaning meters of a type not approved by the village. These water users are being notified to install either Nash or Keystone water meters approved by the village board, or the water supply will be shut off.

Coming Movies

The Mokena outdoor movies are drawing good crowds on Wednesday nights. The feature picture next week will be "Young Dynamite" a love action story. On July 19th the picture will be a newspaper story with Chas. Starret in "Murder on the Campus."

New Lenox Band Picnic Big Success

The Fourth of July staged by the four bands of Plano, Manhattan, Elwood and New Lenox at the Batson grove north of Hickory Creek in New Lenox drew an extraordinary large crowd. Band concerts, games and a grand display of fireworks in the evening attracted a very large attendance.

Proceeds of the picnic were in the neighborhood of $900 and plans are now being laid to hold another picnic on Labor Day.

FORMER MOKENA GIRL MARRIED IN CHICAGO

Miss Alice Horras, former Mokena resident, daughter of Mrs. John Horras, now of Chicago, was united in marriage last Saturday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in the St. Sabina's Catholic church at 78th and Throop streets in Chicago to Mr. Joseph C. Schmitz of Chicago.

The bride approached the altar on the arm of her brother Jack, who gave her in marriage. She was lovely in a pale pink silk net gown over pale pink taffeta, with a net veil of the same color extending from a small cap of small rose buds, and carrying an arm bouquet of bride's roses. She was served by her sister Marie and a sister of the groom who both wore pale pink net gowns over pale pink taffeta, a picture hat of the same color and carried arm bouquets of blue delphiniums and pink roses.

The ushers, best man and groom wore white suits.

A wedding dinner and reception was held in the Viking Hall at Emerald Avenue and 69th Street following the ceremony. About 150 guests were present. At eight o'clock the same evening a dance was held in the same hall and 300 guests were present. A buffet luncheon was served at that time.

Mr. and Mrs. Schmitz went on a motor trip thru the east and will be at home upon their return, in an apartment in Chicago which they have furnished.

Orland To Employ Maintenance Man

At the last meeting of the Village Board it was suggested that the position of Pumper be dispensed with since the pump is now completely automatic in its operation and a new position of Village Maintainer be created. This man would be a full time employee of the Village and would work forty hours per week the year around. The man the board is looking for must be able to dig and repair all water leaks and repair water meters as well as maintain the pump house; he must be able to run the street grader and maintain culverts and catch basins; he would be expected to serve notices of violations of ordinances and would be deputized as a police officer. Anyone having these qualifications should see Mayor Kollman or some member of the Board.

S. W. League Playoff At Lockport

Three teams will battle for first place Sunday at Lockport when Orland, Worth and Lockport play together.

Orland will play the first game against Lockport at 1:30 p. m. The winner of this game will battle Worth in the second game at approximately 3:30 p. m. The games will be played at the Lockport High School Athletic field. Everybody is invited out to witness this double bill against these three well matched teams.

Orland will depend on their old battery of O'Neill and Gabrine.

Lockport will probably star Ananson and White and Worth will have Sames and Lode as the battery.

All Church Picnic At Tinley July 17

The picnic committee has made final plans for the first All-Church picnic. The picnic is to be held at the Harry Brandau Orchard, July 13, afternoon and evening. The place is two and one half miles west of Tinley Park, then one quarter mile north or just one quarter mile north of the formerly located country Methodist church.

There will be plenty of games, races and amusements. Eats and refreshments are going to be available at reasonable prices, so you need not bring lunch.

The evening is scheduled to have a band concert to entertain. The church members invite everybody to come and help celebrate this festival and make it an enjoyable day.

Hold Picnic

Mokena Royal Neighbor camp held a picnic for their juveniles on Thursday of last week at Mokena Park. About 22 were in attendance. A delicious picnic lunch was served and games were played.

White Man Must Eventually Leave Orient But Japan's Current Attempt Is Doomed

Danger of Another War
Expected to Change
Tokyo's Program.

By HAROLD KINGSLEY
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Once upon a time there was a stubborn little Japanese boy who wanted to make an impression on a little Chinese girl. He offered her presents but they were refused. He even whipped her, which was ungentlemanly, but her spirit remained unbroken. Finally the little Jap boy discovered the little Chinese girl had stronger love for a little white boy whose father might have been French or British and whose father was American. So the Jap boy decided the only way to win his maiden's heart was to get rid of competition—chase the white boy back to his own block.

Such, in storybook language, is the situation in China today. It popped into headlines a few weeks ago when Japan threw a barricade around the British concession at Tientsin, but the very nature of that move revealed that Tokyo was merely looking for an excuse.

Make Mountain of Molehill.

Japan demanded surrender of four Chinese charged with murdering a native official sympathetic to the Jap cause. The British refused, claiming insufficient evidence. When Jap protests were met with offers of arbitration or mediation, Tokyo replied with demands which made a mountain of a molehill and enlarged the Tientsin incident into an argument involving Britain's entire Far Eastern policy. The Japs demanded that London give no aid to Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, give up 50,000,000 Chinese dollars held by a bank in the British concession, and co-operate "loyally" with North China's new Japanese government.

Tientsin, therefore, was merely part of a deliberate campaign to embarrass Britain and force her into concessions at a time when she was busy shooting off Hitler and Mussolini on the European front.

Why? This goes back to the storybook tale of the Jap boy, the Chinese girl and the handsome young white lad, who, incidentally, had a pair of dirty hands. It goes back exactly 100 years to 1839 when Britain waged its infamous opium war, precipitated when Chinese mandarins protested against British import of opium from China. From this victory came the 1842 treaty giving Britain the highly coveted island of Hongkong. At the same time China opened Shanghai, Canton, Amoy, Foochow and Ningpo as treaty ports for world traders.

Trend Changed in 1926.

Thus began the new era in China. Through subsequent years the white man's exploitation grew until 1926, when Chiang Kai-shek came to power and began demanding that Occidentals be denied the unusual privileges which had made them practically overlords of China. But Chiang changed his tune in 1934 when Japan's new imperialism forced him to begin seeking help of Americans and Europeans.

That search has continued in the two years since Japan invaded Peiping, flattened Shanghai and crushed Hankow. Driven westward by the mighty Tokyo war machine, the Chinese government has not collapsed as the victor planned, but has gained new strength from the support of western democracies. Today, though thousands of square miles rest under Jap domination, China is paradoxically more united than when the war started!

No nation is blameless in China. All have exploited this ancient land to its utmost, so Japan need have fewer compunctions about the job she must do. This is no license to wage war and bomb innocents, but with her maddening self-righteousness she feels obliged to wipe out the white man in China. The reason is clear: So long as he remains, just that long will the Chinese have faith in Japan's inability to capture their nation.

Conflict With 'New Order.'

Banks in the British concessions shelter Chinese silver which belonged to governments supplanted by the Japanese, and which Tokyo needs to establish yen currency in China. Moreover, Japanese soldiers must move cautiously around foreign concessions lest international incidents result. In short, Japan plans a "new order" in which China will be swallowed politically and economically. So long as Occidentals get the cream of Chinese trade, this new order cannot be realized.

But the Land of the Rising Sun has a foolishly stubborn philosophy, a patriotism that often borders on insanity and a disregard for tradition that may some day lead to a smack on the chin. Already starving from her two-year war in China, Japan now risks involvement with the western democracies and Russia at a time when a new war would be national suicide.

She wants no alliance with Italy and Germany, yet the stubborn resistance of Britain and the U. S. over the Tientsin incident is good evidence that only a European war can force London to capitulate to her demands. Such a development would hasten the inevitable pact between Russia and Britain, thus bringing the Soviet into full play on Japan's Manchukuoan border. Surrounded by enemies and inevitably meeting revitalized resistance in China, Japan would be in poor shape.

But what of the inevitable? Can white men continue to keep "face" in a modern, industrialized Orient? Immediate issues notwithstanding, both Chinese and Japanese are disgusted with a medieval system of foreign concessions. Eventually they will feel their strength and arise. On that day the white man must go back home and the Orient will return to its honorable fathers.

Steamer Travel Was Big Adventure in Old Days

Among the objects seen by visitors to the Maritime museum of Gothenburg, Sweden, is a steamship ticket issued in 1858. It contains these regulations:

"Each passenger will be furnished the following rations weekly: Seven pounds of ship's bread, two pounds of salt pork, two and one-quarter pounds of flour, one pound of salt herring, and a daily ration of one can of water for drinking and washing purposes. These rations are furnished from the ship's supplies, but each passenger must furnish his own butter, sugar, mustard, syrup, pepper, and vinegar. Each passenger is responsible for bringing his own bed clothing, and tin dishes for eating, drinking, and washing purposes. The ship's master has the right to withhold water rations until the promenade deck has been swept and cleaned each day by the passengers."

Political strategy of the New Dealers seems to be to start hitting the most likely opponent early... American merchant marine in danger of receiving another blow... Developments in the Democratic sparring match for the presidential nomination are thick and furious.

WASHINGTON.—It has been rather widely quoted that President Roosevelt, in introducing Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan to King George at the famous British embassy garden party, commented: "This is the man who thinks he is going to succeed me next year, but he isn't." Also that the President did not mention Vandenberg's name.

It has not been widely quoted at all, even in Michigan, that the following day, when Senator Vandenberg was presented to the king in the Capitol, the king said: "I am very glad to get your name in order to connect it up with what occurred yesterday."

All of which is chiefly of interest in that Mr. Roosevelt's feeling about this particular candidate for his seat cropped out so visibly that even a visiting ruler, whose mind was concentrated almost entirely on trying to do the right thing and make an impression which would not let England down, noticed it.

It is of a piece with the President's reference to Thomas E. Dewey as "that little two-spot," and to the campaign the New Dealers have been so consistently conducting since last winter against Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio.

The point here is not whether this is sound strategy or not. If the best political traditions are to be followed, it would seem to be. Start hitting the most likely opponent early.

The importance at the moment is that apparently this is the strategy of the New Deal, and that the No. 1 target has changed three times since last November. In that month the remark about Dewey being a "two-spot" was made. By February apparently the New Dealers were figuring that Taft was the man they had to beat. By June of this year Vandenberg had moved up to this dangerous position.

Later On It Probably Will Be Some One Else

Next September it may be somebody else. Undoubtedly three or four more Republicans will be on this hot spot before next June, when all doubts will be resolved by the Republican national convention.

Dewey is still the most popular Republican for the nomination if one believes the polls. But inside New Deal information is that he began slipping rapidly some time back so far as the men apt to control the delegates are concerned. Dewey does not hit the New Deal and Roosevelt himself so hard as most Republican leaders would like.

So Taft went into top position, as far as they are concerned, and it didn't take the New Deal scouts long to find this out. Then Taft was hurt by two things. One was his failure to make a hit at several important gatherings where he spoke, of which one was the annual dinner of the newspaper editors. The other was the reported dislike for his chief opponent for the Buckeye delegation, Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio, by the county chairman of that state.

This put Vandenberg out front, which is the reason he seemed the chief menace to continuance of the New Deal early in June. It may be of course that Mr. Roosevelt was also especially annoyed with the Michigan senator because it was Vandenberg who directed the successful fight to block further appropriations for the Florida ship canal.

American Merchant Marine To Receive Another Blow

Something is always cropping up to prevent the development of an American merchant marine. Now it is about to receive another blow. The house foreign affairs committee went out of its way to prevent it, but the blow is almost surely coming when the so-called Bloom bill (introduced by Representative Sol Bloom along the lines advocated by Secretary of State Cordell Hull) gets over to the senate.

The trouble lies in the "cash and carry" provisions of the measure. The bill provides that munitions and war materials may be sold abroad, even to belligerents, and may be shipped, but it also provides that title to the goods must be transferred from American ownership before the goods leave American harbors.

The original cash and carry provision, regarded as going a long way toward removing the danger of possible incidents, forbade their shipment in American vessels. The Bloom bill was changed in this respect so as to permit the use of American bottoms in shipping war supplies abroad. The prevailing argument in the house committee was that if ships flying the United States flag were barred from this trade, this would be another blow to American shipping, and a deterrent to building American ships.

Under the Bloom bill ships flying the American flag may transport anything they please except that they may not enter zones which, after the breaking out of war, may be declared dangerous by the President of the United States.

But on the senate side of the Capitol this idea of permitting ships flying the United States flag to carry munitions of war to the ports of a belligerent country seems a very dangerous doctrine to the group of senators anxious to isolate this country—or insulate to use the latest word—against every possible danger of war.

Danger of an 'Incident' That Might Lead to War

Senators in this group insist that the danger of an "incident" is just as great—just as apt to inflame the people of this country to a stage where war might result—if a ship flying the American flag and manned by United States seamen were torpedoed as though United States nationals also owned the cargo she was carrying.

They do not see any difference in the possible effects. They do not think that the shipment of munitions to belligerents should be permitted at all, and would like to prevent the shipment of all war supplies, but recognize that the opposition to them is too strong to permit their going this far.

But in the amendment of the present neutrality act they are sure they can work up enough popular sentiment on their side to prevent ships flying the United States flag from sailing with loads of foreign owned munitions—though produced in the United States and sold by United States nationals—to belligerent ports.

Bitterness Against Jones Something to Write About

Developments in the Roosevelt-Garner-Farley-McNutt presidential sparring are as thick and furious as though this were next spring instead of the Democratic National convention being a full year off. Within the last week bitterness of many of the New Dealers against Garner has reached the danger stage, all of it resulting from what the New Dealers assumed to be a Garner-inspired story which stated that the vice president would stick to the end, regardless of any other development, in his fight for the nomination.

As a matter of fact, Garner did not know about this story before it was printed. But it so happens that it was written by the Washington correspondent of a Texas newspaper owned by Jesse H. Jones! Hence bitterness against Jones is something to write home about. The New Dealers are calling him everything from an "ingrate" up and down.

Moreover, they are trying to cut in on Garner's Texas strength now by flirting with Sam Rayburn, Democratic leader of the house, on the notion that Rayburn may be nominated for vice president, with Roosevelt as head of the ticket, next year. This same hope is being held out to a number of other Democrats who they have reason to fear might not go along with the Roosevelt forces—otherwise—at the convention.

Not Disloyal for Any Democrat to Make the Race

"Why shouldn't any Democrat run for the nomination?" one of them demanded of the writer. "Roosevelt has not said one word to indicate that he intends to run. But even if he did tomorrow, does that mean that it is disloyal for any other Democrat to have aspirations? And disloyal to whom? They talk about Garner's pledging himself for the 'duration' at the Philadelphia convention. What do they mean 'duration'? As long as Roosevelt lives? Roosevelt doesn't own the Democratic party. If he wants the nomination nothing will prevent his going after it. But there is nothing disloyal, to the party or to anybody, in any Democrat who chooses making the race. Our man is in the fight, and he will win."

One development that caused much surprise was the statement of Senator Sherman by McNutt for the vice presidential nomination.

As a result, the Texans have been digging in further on the Indiana situation. They had been making cautious inquiries before, trying to get second-choice commitments. An insider in the Garner movement tells the writer that unless there are some unexpected upsets Roosevelt will probably get 19 of Indiana's delegates and Garner nine.

The world's longest continuous railroad journey today is on the Trans-Siberian Express between Moscow and Vladivostok, Russia. Although the distance is only 5,812 miles, the running time is 8 days and 21 hours.

After 12 centuries, the house-leek, Sempervivum tectorum, a common evergreen plant, still is grown on roofs in many villages of several European countries to protect the houses from thunder.

Pharaohs Also Had Refugees; Solved Problem With Slavery

CHICAGO.—Ancient Egypt, no less than the world today, had a refugee problem, Prof. Harold H. Nelson of the University of Chicago's Oriental Institute has discovered.

Professor Nelson, field director of the epigraphic and architectural survey of the institute, made this disclosure on his return from Egypt where he has been directing work of deciphering records on the walls of the temples and palaces of Rameses III at Luxor.

The ancient Egyptians were faced with a refugee problem when peoples of neighboring countries were dispossessed by invading barbarians and attempted to overrun Egypt. These refugees were made slaves.

Dictators Held Sway. "It is interesting to note historically," said Professor Nelson, "that these ancient governments we are studying were dictatorships, though not of the totalitarian types of Germany and Italy."

In conflicts among the ancient states, people of less developed countries usually "moved in on" more developed countries, Professor Nelson pointed out. Today, the trend is for highly developed, industrialized countries to seek to move in on less developed countries and exploit their resources.

"The motives, however, of the old and new dictators, it seems, were the same," said Professor Nelson. "They sought and seek plunder, to better their own conditions, to take over the good things the other countries have."

Propagandists Were Active.

Professor Nelson revealed that in the "old days," 1500 B. C., the same type of political propaganda practiced today was known and used. No record, for example, was publicized of defeats, and mistakes were carefully concealed. "Rameses once admitted his army was defeated but said that he, personally turned the tide," commented Professor Nelson. "We have found records of the 'other side' and the same event takes on a new appearance. Rameses took a licking."

"The refugee problem of the ancients differed in another important respect from the situation today. Then there was no conflict of political ideology, as exists in Spain. There was no public sentiment on the subject. People were merely driven out of their countries by invaders, and superior numbers had more weight than today, when mechanical advantage looms so much more important."

Refugee Problems Created.

"Populations also were deliberately shifted and a refugee problem created in ancient countries also to break the national power of rival states. The Assyrians practiced this in the Eighth and Seventh centuries B. C."

"Other nations, notably the Romans, shifted populations for a double purpose: To reward or pension soldiers and at the same time garrison strategic border areas. This practice was carried on virtually up to the World war as evidenced by the Turks' shift of Circassians to defend the desert frontier against attacking Arab tribes."

Professor Nelson revealed that the inscriptions on the walls of the ruins at Luxor, when transcribed and annotated, will fill seven huge volumes. Four of these volumes are completed.

Comma Outweighs The Mere Period On Super Scales

PITTSFIELD, MASS.—The power behind a mosquito's bite is the punch of a super-lightweight, an exclamation point is four times heavier than a period, and there are about 2,300,000 grains of sugar per pound.

Such irrelevant information has arrived from weight studies by Dr. Harry F. Miller, General Electric microscopist, with super-sensitive scales, a microchemical balance.

The throbbing sting of the mosquito bite results from a small object indeed, according to Dr. Miller's figures. The mosquito's stinger weighs only .000018 of a gram, or .0000006 of an ounce.

Punctuation is also lightweight matter. Dr. Miller's measurements disclose that a period weighs only .0000001 of an ounce. This comma (,) is twice as heavy and an exclamation point weighs all of .0000003 of an ounce.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Personal Glimpse Of 'Jack' Garner By Old Friend

A rare, intimate glimpse of John Nance Garner, the man, is contained in a column entitled "Perspective," written in News Week magazine by Editor Raymond Moley, former assistant secretary of State under President Roosevelt.

"It's true that Mr. Garner is picturesque," he says. "But he's picturesque only because his method of life, which is simple and natural, contrasts so weirdly with the sham living that goes on in Washington. So far as I can see, he's a man who lives his life as he wants to live it. If he were the manager of a ranch or the president of a bank or the publisher of a newspaper with no possible political ends to serve by 'quaintness,' he would still do just about as he does."

"He doesn't live simply because he wants to get votes. He lives that way because he is a simple man. He refuses to go out to dinners because he wants to go to bed early and get up early. He smokes cigars because he likes cigars. He goes hunting because he likes to hunt. "The Garner scheme of things shouts to the world: Here I am—a mystery, no deception, just a man trying to do his job. Speaking politically, if that's what you want, O.K. If it isn't what you want, good-bye and no hard feelings. "There's nothing cheap or unreal about all this. No man who's putting on an act can serve in the Congress of the United States for 35 years and still keep the affection and respect of his discerning colleagues."

"Mr. Garner doesn't read an awful lot, except the newspapers. He learns a lot from talking to people. The garden of his mind is carefully pruned. "Now that it's become fashionable again to salute the flag and stand up when 'The Star-Spangled Banner' is played, it can be said with impunity that no man loves his country with more unabashed fervor than Mr. Garner. If he seems to be less concerned about re-sounding phrases like 'America's destiny in the world' than some others are, that's because he's so passionately anxious to see America believe in itself. He's convinced of the durability of democracy as a way of life for the American people. He knows that any danger democracy faces in the United States comes not from without but from within—when people grow careless, indifferent, tired. "Mr. Garner is no nineteenth-century free trader. He believes in protection for American farmers, for American industry. He believes that the concentration of financial power witnessed in the last generation was bad for the country. But, unlike Borah and Brandeis, he doesn't look with horror on big business. He takes the view that probably some businesses are more efficient when they're big and some businesses are better for the public when they're little, and that it's the government's job to try and find out which are which. He profoundly believes that much of the early New Deal legislation was sound, but he shrewdly points to a lack of coherence in its later phases.

"He's for organized labor, but made no secret of his alarm over such excesses as the sit-down strikes to him, the sit-down strikes were nothing more or less than a forcible seizure of private property. He's against the continuous growth of spending in the government—not only because he sees financial chaos at the end of such a course, but because spending has been accompanied by increasing executive indiscretion. "No man has exercised more power in Congress over the years than Mr. Garner. It is a power that does not rest on patronage. The vitality of his mind, the ripeness of his political judgment, the warmth of his affection, his unflinching, unmitigated honesty have compelled the admiration of Republicans as well as Democrats, of radicals and conservatives, Easterners and Westerners. All this despite the tradition that the Vice Presidency is a role of impotence.

"Mr. Garner has made a throne out of a political sarcophagus."

PEAK OF WORLD WAR DISABLED STILL TEN YEARS AWAY

One of the greatest tragedies of the World War will not reach its peak for another ten years, thirty years after the Armistice. By 1949, at the present rate of increase, according to Veterans' Administration statistics, approximately 2,000 World War veterans a month will be "cracking up" mentally. An average of 600 cases of mental collapse among World War veterans are occurring at the present time.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

KEEP YOUR SALT CELLARS CLEAN

THE other day I read of an eccentric old woman, rich and socially prominent, who went from house to house judging the occupants by the condition of the salt cellars on their tables.

If these were clean and well kept she put her stamp of approval on the household, but if they were not, regardless of the graciousness and charm of her hostess, she put them down as dowdy folks.

Not all of us, fortunately, are quite so critical, but in one sense we are. And it is good that we are. We are critical of the merchandise we buy and of the merchants from whom we buy it. It is our criticism which keeps the standards of goods and stores high.

One of the many advantages of advertising is that it invites us to be critical of the goods being advertised.

The advertiser assures us that his goods are good. He invites us to compare them with others. We do. If he relaxes for a minute and lets his standards drop, we discern it. We tell others. We cease buying his product.

He knows that even the finest of commercial reputations will suffer if a mere handful of people get wind

Approximately 700,000 of the 4 1/2 million men who served in our armed forces during the World War have died since the Armistice.

Of the World War Veterans alive today, approximately 85 per cent are married and they average nearly 2 children each. These men now average 47 years of age. They're dying at the rate of 113 daily. A growing number are becoming neuropsychiatric cases. These deaths and mental collapses are leaving a rapidly increasing number of dependent wives and children to be cared for by the government. At the present time, the widows of veterans who died of non-service connected causes, are receiving an average of $22 a month each. This, we maintain, is inadequate with which to support life. It is much less than the government standard for workers on relief projects.

An ironical phase of the veteran problem is that so many disabled veterans, or the wives of disabled veterans, are unable to obtain employment on government relief projects. If they receive as much as $10 a month government pension, they are ineligible for government employment.

Though $10 a month is obviously inadequate for the necessities of life. The United States Civil Service allows veterans a 10 per cent benefit for disability.

But because these veterans seeking civil service jobs are disabled they are refused Civil Service employment.

The average government compensation allowed service-connected World War veterans is $42 a month while more than 40,000 non-service connected disabled veteran are receiving only $30 a month each.

"Spread" Between Chicago and Interior Markets Fluctuates Daily

The little pigs pictured above are learning that the "Spread" or "Difference" between prices paid for hogs at the Chicago central market and at interior markets in Southern Minnesota and Iowa is not a fixed amount determined by freight rates and other marketing costs. For, if this were true, the interior price line (shown at the bottom of the shaded area) would be a straight line.

As the chart shows, the difference between Chicago top and average interior top prices fluctuates from day to day, and, during the twelve months' period shown, has varied between the two extremes of 10 cents to 65 cents per cwt. below the Chicago market.

In this connection, Miss Publication 222, "The Direct Marketing of Hogs," published by the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, states: "There is no fixed relationship between prices at any market and prices at other public markets or at interior points. Data shows that a rise or a decline in hog prices is as likely to appear first at interior markets as at public markets. Although there is a close relationship between prices quoted at some markets and prices at other markets, no one market actually determines the price for hogs sold at other markets in this area. The equilibrium of the composite supply and composite demand at all markets marks the level of hog prices."

Data shown in the chart was furnished by the Federal Market News Service of the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, and is based on top hog prices paid at Chicago and the average top hog prices paid at interior packing houses and concentration points in Iowa and Southern Minnesota for 220 to 250 pound butcher hogs.

News From Springfield

By Bernice T. Van der Vries
Representative, Seventh Senatorial District General Assembly of Illinois

ADJOURNED SINE DIE

Proudly at noon on January 4 I walked up Capitol avenue in Springfield to the State House to take my seat in the House of Representatives for the third time. Stealthily hugging the walls of rotunda of the same building I ran for my very life through the corridors to the protection of the out-of-doors at three o'clock in the morning of July 1 in order to avoid the bombardment of fireworks heralding the close of the session.

Just Clean Fun

To the credit of the 61st General Assembly it must be said that the final day was the most orderly in my experience, since no fireworks were exploded until night, whereas heretofore the work of the entire last week had been interrupted by explosives under the seats and desks of the members. In order to satisfy House members who must have their fun, a fifteen minute mock session was held during a recess at midnight. With fireworks exploding everywhere members took refuge in the corridors and the galleries already overcrowded with spectators. The last scene brought down upon the temporary speaker a pail of ice water from the balcony above him.

Pass Bills in Profusion

On the closing day in the House, which ran from 10 in the morning until 3 the next morning, with brief recesses for meals, the clock having been stopped in the early evening in order to technically finish all work on June 30, more than one hundred Senate bills were passed. In the Senate the same procedure was taking place on House Bills. Many bills were defeated in the closing days in both Houses and many were never given the opportunity for a roll call in the House. 85 Bills were on the calendar when the General Assembly adjourned sine die. It is difficult to understand why Senator Bidwell's Bill placing school elections in Cook County under Permanent Registration was not called for a vote, when the bills were called which were slated for defeat.

District Fares Well

The four members in the Assembly from the seventh district were generally successful in securing the passage of the bills which they sponsored, since 22 bills out of the approximately 300 which were passed originated with the district members. The following bills were successfully carried through both Houses but the exception of those so described all the bills must receive the Governor's approval before becoming laws:

Senate Bill 37 Bidwell—Permits change of party affiliation after 23 months. Signed by the governor.
Senate Bills 67-68 Bidwell—Removes debt incurred for school buildings and working cash fund from debt limitation act.

Senate bill 269 Bidwell—Licenses and regulates insurance adjusters.
Senate Bill 270 Bidwell—Appropriates $20,000 to school district No. 147 in Harvey destroyed by fire.

Senate Bill 592 Bidwell—Amends Sanitary District Civil service act in regard to pensions.

House bill 139 McGrath and others—Appropriation for addition to 8th Infantry Armory in Chicago.

House Bill 958 McGrath, Smith, Gormley—Allows Cook county Forest Preserve district to acquire up to 40,000 instead of 35,000 acres of land.

House bill 774 McGrath, Sprague, Vander Vries—Junior high schools. House bill 809 McGrath, Van der Vries and others—Afro-Mexican exposition.

H. B. 38, Sprague—Provides for staggering elections for 4-year terms for village trustees and clerks. Approved by the Governor.

H. B. 764, Sprague—Re-defines Corporation Act regarding church property.

H. B. 901, Sprague—Motor Vehicle license applications by political subdivisions.

H. B. 232, Van der Vries-McGaughey—Extends Inter-Governmental Cooperation Commission.

H. B. 512 Van der Vries—Established DesPlaines Valley State Park, signed by the Governor.

H. B. 662, Van der Vries-McGaughey—Provides for the organization of Wild Life Districts.

H. B. 891 Van der Vries-McGaughey—Ohio River Sanitation Compact Ratification.

H. B. 925 Van der Vries—Enlarges Sanitary District of Chicago to cover portion of the Village of Midlothian.

H. B. 926 Van der Vries—Prohibits disconnection of land from cities if contiguous to another city.

H. Bills, 1092 and 1095 Van der Vries, Noper, Peters, Clabaugh—Amends municipal budget law as it applies to schools.

Eager For Rest

The passage of bills, however does not represent the entire work of the session. The work of the members of the Assembly in assisting the passage or the defeat of bills carried by other members is even more important in many cases than the actual number of bills introduced and passed. Even the work on amendments is important, such for example, as the efforts of Representative Sprague, the unsuccessful, to secure the adoption of a referendum amendment to the Super-Highway Bills for Chicago and Cook county.

Noteworthy, were the efforts of Representative Schnackenberg on tax pre-judication Bills. Day after day it seemed a hopeless task to coordinate the various views of himself and Representative Daley. Except

New York Skyscrapers Form Back Drop For Air View of Fair

The Trylon and Perisphere, theme of the New York Fair, are seen dominating the 1216½-acre tract. At the lower right is the international area with its magnificent foreign pavilions grouped around the Court of Peace below the Lagoon of Nations. At the lower left is the Court of States. The picture shows the Fair's close proximity to Broadway and the skyscrapers of upper Manhattan.

Actually the Fair is only 10 minutes from Broadway by Long Island Railroad, and about 25 minutes by subway. By motor the trip requires about 30 minutes, with 5 parking fields furnishing ample space. New roads and bridges have prevented congestion of traffic.

for these important bills which passed, the taxpayers should be thankful for the large number of bills which did not pass. In fact a Session in my estimation should be judged by that standard.

Springfield hotels are hoping for a Special Session soon but the members of the Assembly are eager for a long recess. Six months is a long, long pull.

The three teams, Worth, Texaco and Orland will play-off Sunday July 9th.

O'Neill pitched for Orland at Midlothian and was in great form as he limited Midlothian to six scattered hits. Brunner pitched for Midlothian and was also in good form as he gave Orland only 6 hits, but Orland came thru with an extra run to win.

ORLAND PARK

LUDWIG WAZE NUPTIALS

Ray Ludwig of Orland Park and Miss Elanor Waze, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Waze, former Orland residents now of Chicago, were united in marriage in Chicago last Thursday, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Wm. Greve, former pastor of the Christ Lutheran church in Orland Park.

The many friends of this popular couple wish them much happiness.

Miss Velma Reisch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Reisch, has been honored with a number of pre-nuptial showers in honor of her approaching marriage to Edward Lucas of Orland Park. The Orland Park Girl Basketball team of which Miss Reisch has been a member, sponsored a miscellaneous shower. Last Friday Mrs. Harry Heiting sponsored a shower in the Creer hall for the bride-to-be who received many beautiful and useful gifts.

REISCH-LUCAS NUPTIALS

Miss Velma Reisch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Reisch and Edward Lucas will be united in marriage in the St. Michael Catholic church in Orland Saturday morning of this week. In the evening open house will be held to the entire community in the Forest Preserve on 143rd street.

As there were no 4th of July affairs in Orland, many Orland people attended the celebrations held in Marley, Lockport and Lemont.

MOKENA GARDEN CLUB NEWS

The Mokena Garden Club is very grateful for the fine cooperation accorded them by all the organizations who participated in the parade and to the public in general at the dedication of the Pioneer Memorial Cemetery and the Flag and Flag pole which was erected there last Sunday July second.

We especially wish to thank and express our utmost appreciation to the men of the Weighing Department of the Chicago Board of Trade who constructed and erected the flag pole. Mrs. Benson's daughter Mrs. Gordon Swanson deserves a great deal of credit for having been instrumental in obtaining the service of these men.

We also wish to thank Mayor H. F. Mall for donating the flag and Editor Wm. Semmler for donating the programs.

We deeply appreciate the efforts the Mokena Band has made in order to take part in the ceremonies, since previous engagements were pressing them.

It is indeed encouraging to every member of the Garden Club to have witnessed such fine public spirit as was evident at the occasion.

The next meeting of the Mokena Garden Club will be held in the home of Mrs. H. Mall next Tuesday July 11th.

Summer Alfalfa Feeding

"Last summer a number of farmers reported success with seeding alfalfa in July. There are two difficulties that must be met in July summer seeding of alfalfa. If it should be droughty during July and August the alfalfa will not get a start. Last year was ideal. If the growth is not sufficient it may winter kill. Also grasshoppers may tend to destroy the young crop. So far this spring has been ideal for starting alfalfa, clovers, oats and wheat."

Law on the Farm

Horseshoers and horses' tails. These subjects do not belong together, but they are short, and each has a spark of interest.

In 1897, the Illinois legislature passed a law requiring horseshoers to procure a license from a state board of examiners. The Supreme court of the state held the act unconstitutional as interfering with the rights of liberty and the pursuit of happiness guaranteed under Article 2, Section 1, of the constitution of 1870. In 1915 another license law was passed, to be administered by a board of Examiners of Horseshoers.

In 1935, the functions of this board were transferred to the State Department of Registration and Education. No cases involving the constitutionality of this act have ever reached the Supreme Court.

In 1907 a law was passed giving horseshoers a lien for their services. The lien applies to the animal shod, covers a reasonable charge for shoeing and takes precedence over all other claims except those duly recorded prior to the shoeing. To take advantage of the lien, the horseshoer must, within six months after shoeing the animal, file a claim for his lien with the recorder of deeds. The animal may then be sold to satisfy the debt, but the owner may redeem within 90 days by paying the amount of the judgement and all costs.

Horses' tails attracted the attention of the legislature in 1891 at which time it passed, "An act to prevent the mutilation of horses", providing in substance that "whoever cuts the solid part of the tail of any horse in the operation known as docking, or by any other operation performed for the purpose of shortening the tail, unless the same is proved to be a benefit to the horse, shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year, or by a fine of not less than $25.00 nor more than $200.00"

This act is an example of general legislative policy with respect to cruelty to animals, a subject which will be presented more fully later.

The acts discussed in this article may be read by referring to the Illinois Revised Statutes, Chapter 66, Sections 1-26 and Chapter 8, Section 109.

SYNOPSIS

Beautiful young Kay Forrest has been employed by Christine Maynard, photographer, to pose for a series of pictures, the background of which will be exquisite Cathedral Gardens, famous Southern resort. Unknown to them, one Jeff Butler, mean, unscrupulous "swamp angel," has led a friend to spy on the two women. Kay, of necessity, is scantily clad while posing for the camera studies. Kay frequently stays with Mrs. Ruth Hamilton, her son Barney, of whom Kay is very fond, and her daughter Margaret. Mrs. Hamilton, a remarkable woman, conceived the idea of the Gardens following the death of her husband. One night, after a local dance, Kirk Reynolds, a ne'er-do-well gambler of Beverly, a resort town, and Kay go for a ride. Kirk's car collides with that of Harvey Jackson, and during the ensuing argument Kirk whips out a gun and kills the young, popular engineer. Kay is completely stunned by the tragedy.

CHAPTER III—Continued

Kay's hands were clasped in her lap, her figure racked by dry sobs. "Oh, Kirk . . . it was so awful . . ." "Lay off that. I'm trying to be kind, but you won't let me." She said, "Will you go away?" "No. That'd be a dumb play. Then they'd know I did it." "But if you stay in Beverly . . ." "I've got to. And you've got to play along with me." His hand fell on her wrist. "You've got to see?" His voice frightened her. The kindness had gone from it. It had become the sort of voice he had used with Harvey Jackson. Cold. Bitter. Inviting no argument.

She said, "I don't understand . . ." "Murder is murder," he explained flatly. "A man can only be hanged once. Does that tell you anything?" "No . . ."

"Then listen. You saw something tonight. You know I don't bluff. If you open your mouth to anyone you'll get the same dose Jackson got."

Calmly. Quietly. Just like that. If you say a word to anybody, I'll kill you, too. She was like one hypnotized . . . but the recent tragedy had been too vividly seared on her young brain to admit of doubt.

"I'm scaring you because you need to be scared." His tone was conversational. "I want you to realize just what you're up against."

"But Kirk . . . you couldn't!" "No!" He laughed mirthlessly. "A man will do a heap of things to save his own hide. You're just a kid. You're all shot to hell by what you just saw. You're figuring you've got to talk to someone. Right?"

She said nothing; made no gesture. He continued.

"You'd be likely to tell your father. Or this Hamilton guy. I'm warning you . . . don't!"

Still she did not answer.

"Here's why," he went on. "And I don't want to make it any tougher on you than I can help. Only you've got to understand. For your own sake." His hands were tight on the wheel. "It won't be safe for anybody to know what happened tonight. If you tell your old man—or Barney Hamilton—they'll try to do something about it. That won't be healthy for them."

"But they had nothing to do with it."

"They'll be in it the minute you spill a word. And remember what I said before: they can't kill me any deader for killing three men than for killing one."

"That damnable logic again. Cold statement of cold fact."

"I'd do it. You saw enough tonight to know I would. So for their sakes . . . you keep 'em out of it." A pause, and then, "And one more thing. Maybe you'll figure that if you squealed I'd be thrown in jail and everybody would be safe. Well, that don't go, either. My dice-dealer, Dan—I've enough on him to hang him twice over. If I wanted to get someone and couldn't—on account of being in jail—he'd do it for me. And be glad of the chance."

They passed a big white house set far back from the road. A plantation. Kay saw people on the broad, high veranda; heard snatches of laughter and the syncopation of a jazz orchestra playing in some gay New York night spot . . . and intruding into this southern tragedy through the loud speaker of a radio.

"Put yourself in my place," said Kirk. "Then you'll know I'm not bluffing."

She could put herself in his place; that was the staggering thing. She knew that he was telling no less than the truth. She, of all persons in the world, had reason to know that he was deadly and cold-blooded. She felt terribly young and alone.

view the fruit of their literary activities with pride.

Entering the town from east or west, you are confronted by this:

WELCOME TO BEVERLY
Pop. 6,500

Departing, the tourist glimpses the reverse side of the same archway and is edified by another literary confection:

PLEASED TO HAVE MET YOU
COME AGAIN TO BEVERLY
Pop. 6,500

Artistically and perhaps esthetically the signs are intriguing, however little they might seem to blend with the sleepy tranquillity of the little southern town. They are wrong, however, in one important respect, the optimistic Chamber of Commerce being inclined to ignore cold facts.

Some few persons resent an exaggeration which defies the Federal census of 1930. Government figures proclaim to the world that the municipality of Beverly has 4,376 residents. Members of the Chamber of Commerce declare frequently, officially and vehemently that this count is untrue and that there has been deliberate and unforgivable discrimination. They appear to believe that such an undercount is a cataclysmic thing, affecting the well-being of the entire world, and their assertion that sixty-five hundred persons reside in the little town is merely a method of answering this libel. "All right," is the effect of their statement, "we'll tell the world how many people we think we have."

These sign-boards are a direct and proximate result of the successful launching of Cathedral Gardens. With the Gardens completed, the gravel road leading to them freshly scraped, the White Star Hotel newly papered—in spots—leading citizens and business men conceived the idea that tourists might come to visit awhile. The signs were therefore erected and casual arrangements made to entertain a few strangers.

But for some reason which Beverly never could quite understand, the fame of the Gardens spread overnight. There were other beautiful Gardens in the South, many of them, whose fame had been broadcast for decades, but there was something about this new place of Mrs. Hamilton's which intrigued the fancy of tourists. They came not singly, but in battalions. They descended upon the somnolent little town and swarmed about its streets. And since Beverly was a considerable distance from any large city—being therefore a metropolis of sorts—the tourists usually remained for two, three or four days.

They visited Cathedral Gardens in the early morning. They flocked there during all the daylight hours. And, almost invariably, they remained in anticipation of moonlight nights when the Gardens reached the zenith of enchantment. Visitors wrote to their friends:

"Of course Cathedral Gardens are beyond description. You must see them. But when you do come, plan to stay a few days. This is a queer little town, but lots of fun. The hotel isn't half bad and there's dancing every night. One good picture-house, and several places along the roads serve barbecue sandwiches which are worth driving a few miles to get. There are other things, too. The proprietor will tip you off if he thinks you're safe—believe it or not—to a dice-game on the second floor. Regular crap-table, and it's fun, provided you don't mind losing a little. We have stayed five days and we're coming back when the azaleas are over and the lotus season begins. They say that's going to be breathtaking."

And, on more than one occasion, letters were despatched from gentlemen tourists to other gentlemen who might become tourists. These letters touched on another point:

" . . . And in addition to all that, Jim, old man, there's plenty of hotcha here. If you're lonely, meet Miss Henkel, the beauty operator in the hotel. She's easy on the eyes—and boy! how tropic! The rest is up to you. As a matter of fact, the whole thing is a miracle. I can't help wondering what the old-timers in this burg think of the jazz invasion."

"P. S. This Henkel dame answers to the name of Babe. What she answers is something else again. A word to the wise is foolish."

It had taken Beverly no time at all to become tourist-conscious, nor to exploit its visitors. Robbie Morse raised the price for his best rooms to two dollars a day, and never quite oriented himself to the fact that it was paid without question.

Pleasant homes on streets jutting off from Monument Square placed signs in their front yards: "Tourists Accommodated" and some of them assumed names: "The Gray House—Meals & Beds for Tourists," "Welcome to Ye Olde Inne. Chicken Dinners and Comfortable Rooms," "Rooms. Meals. Free Parking. Make This Your Headquarters While Visiting Cathedral Gardens."

And all of this had happened suddenly and bewilderingly to a town which for more than two hundred years had dozed placidly under southern skies; a town which was bordered on the east by Big Moccasin Swamp and on all other sides by tradition; a town where business had been depression-proof and boom-proof; a town unaware of the outside world except on those infrequent occasions when the nation had indulged in warfare. Beverly was startled, business men applauded.

A little roadster, having as passengers Kay Forrest and Barney Hamilton, approached Beverly from the east, bumped across the railroad tracks and moved slowly up Palmetto Avenue toward Monument Square.

The Square was crowded. Outside the White Star Hotel was a fleet of cars, most of them wearing the license plates of other States. The general trend of passenger traffic was eastward, toward Cathedral

"A man can only be hanged once."

Gardens. Farmers, in from the country in rattle-trap flivvers, searched despairingly for parking space and cursed Beverly's new popularity. The Constable on duty at the Square made large and frantic gestures in an entirely futile effort to regulate traffic.

Barney asked a question. "Home?"

"Yes."

"Right away?"

"Yes."

He said, "You're funny. You haven't even been to town in two weeks, and now you have to run home. Why?"

"I must. Really."

"Before you get out—" he started.

"What?"

"Well, I suppose it's none of my business and I swore I wasn't going to butt in . . ."

"Go ahead, Barney."

"All right." He drew a deep breath. "What's wrong?"

"What's wrong with what?"

"With you?"

The smile died from her eyes. She said, "Nothing."

"Tell that to somebody else. I know there is."

"What makes you think so?"

"Lots of things. It started the day after you went to the dance with Kirk Reynolds two weeks ago. You've been different. And you haven't even wanted to come to town until this morning. It's almost as though you were afraid of something."

She said, "Maybe I am."

"Then spill it. You know how I feel about you."

She was startled. "What makes you think so?"

"I've got to think it. Whatever the trouble is, it started the night you went to the dance with him."

"Yes." Her eyes were somber. "As a matter of fact, Barney, that's why I'm in town today."

"Why?"

"To see Kirk."

"But why? What's the big idea of wasting your time on a louse like him?"

She said, "I've got to talk to him, that's all I can tell you."

The boy's eyes narrowed. "That telephone call you got last night, was that from him?"

"Yes."

"He told you to come in this morning?"

"He asked me to."

"And you won't explain what's eating on you?"

"Barney! I can't! It isn't that I don't want to."

"I see." He spoke gently. "Listen, honey—there's a lot of nasty talk going around regarding Kirk Reynolds. You haven't heard it because you haven't been in town in the last two weeks. And I haven't told you. But I'll tell you this much—I don't like the idea of your playing around with him."

She said, "I don't either, Barney. But this morning I've got to see him."

"Check! I wish you'd tell me what's what."

"I would . . . if I could."

He lighted a cigarette with fingers which were none too steady. "Going back to the Gardens tonight?"

"Yes."

"With me?"

"I hope so."

"I'll pick you up here at five. Oke?"

"Right. So now . . ." She put a warm hand over his in brief caress. Then she jumped out of the car and moved up the walkway toward the veranda of her home. He looked after her with troubled eyes.

"Something's awful wrong," he told himself, "and I'm going to find out what it is."

CHAPTER IV

Mrs. Emma Forrest was a fine woman. Her friends agreed that she was fine; that she had an overplus of those sterling and pious qualities which make for social success and domestic happiness in a town like Beverly.

No one, or at least very few, persons ever criticized Emma Forrest. She ran her home immaculately, dressed well and plainly, did ardent church work, belonged to a reading circle, and was inordinately fond of helping neighbors when there was illness in the house, though it was not unknown that after these neighborly excursions she invariably had something to talk about: something personal and intimate, like the dearth of bed linen or the condition of kitchen plumbing or the shocking failure of the ill woman to have stocked her pantry shelves with preserves.

Mrs. Forrest was forty-eight years of age. She was not fat, but she definitely was heavy. Solid. Not comfortable at all, but solid. Folks asserted that her face showed strength of character. Her manner was positive—so positive that Andrew Forrest, her rather smallish husband, had acquired a chronic submissiveness. He never—or very seldom—argued with Emma, and on such rare occasions as he did, he never won. At least Emma never acknowledged that he had. She was that sort of a woman: a thing was right because she said it was right.

The good upper-middle-class housewives of the town admired Emma Forrest. They admired her sterling qualities, her goodness of heart, her efficient management of her household, her success in having molded her twenty-two-year-old son, Andy, into a stalwart masculine edition of herself. And they wondered why a thoughtless Providence had inflicted upon her such a daughter as Kay. "She's wild, that's what she is—in spite of everything her mother has tried to do for her." They said, "She'll come to no good end, mark my words." They said, "It's a pity Kay couldn't have turned out to be a fine girl. Emma didn't deserve to have that sort of daughter."

By that, Beverly did not mean to infer that Kay Forrest was immoral, although there were some few who, without particular conviction, hinted that they wouldn't be so terribly surprised to learn that she was.

This morning the family had finished breakfast. They were waiting, Mrs. Forrest and Andy rather grim and pious. Andrew Forrest who, by original selection and biological chance, had become nominal head of the household, uncertain and ill at ease. He knew that Kay was to be greeted with a barrage of criticism, and inasmuch as there existed between him and his nineteen-year-old daughter a bond of friendship and sympathy and understanding which was beyond the comprehension of the virtuous Emma . . . he waited gallantly to give such meager support as lay within his power.

They saw Kay step out of Barney Hamilton's little car. They saw her move up the walk; cross the veranda. They saw her come through the front door and approach the dining-room. Mrs. Forrest greeted her with a remark which was not unobvious.

Mrs. Forrest said, "We've been waiting for you, Katherine."

Kay caught an almost imperceptible warning flicker of her father's right eyelid. Therefore she answered meekly, "Yes, ma'am."

Removing Whitewash.—To remove whitewash from windows, rub with a cloth dipped in hot vinegar.

Keeping Mustard Fresh.—Mustard will keep fresh and moist much longer if a pinch of salt is added during the mixing.

Storing Honey.—Store honey in a warm, dry place. It should not be kept in the cellar or in a damp place as it will absorb moisture and ferment.

Meals That Are Different

A slice of golden-yellow cheese with a time-mellowed sharpness of flavor is the perfect accompaniment for a piece of rich, juicy, apple pie—but all too often we forget that its usefulness doesn't stop there. There are so many varieties of cheese, and so many uses for each, that menu making with this versatile food is fun.

There are rich, full-flavored cheeses, cheeses with a tempting sharpness of flavor, and delicate, mild cheeses—cheeses to suit every taste, and for every use, from appetizer to dessert.

Because cheese is high in food value and comparatively low in cost, meals built around it are nutritious and economical, too. And if you're feeding a family that won't drink milk, remember that serving cheese is an excellent way of getting more milk into the diet, for most cheese is concentrated whole milk (or milk which has been partially skimmed).

This group of cheese recipes, which I've found temptingly delicious, will help you to plan meals that are different and very good to eat. There are new flavor combinations—the sharp tang of mustard added to the mellow taste of old cheese, pungent chives with cottage cheese, and an old favorite—ham and eggs with richly flavored cheese to bring out the best in both. These recipes, which have been tested in my own kitchen, are practical and easy to use.

Swiss Cheese French Toast.

8 slices bread
¼ cup butter
4 square slices Swiss cheese (½-inch thick)
3 eggs
3 tablespoons milk
½ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
Dash paprika
¼ cup butter

Remove crusts from bread. Spread one side of bread with creamed butter. Make sandwiches of cheese and bread, firmly pressing edges together. Beat eggs and add milk, salt, pepper and paprika. Melt remaining butter in a skillet. Dip sandwiches in egg mixture and fry in hot butter. When golden brown on both sides, remove from pan and serve very hot.

Macaroni and Cheese.

1 cup macaroni (uncooked)
½ cup grated cheese
1 teaspoon salt
Black pepper
2 tablespoons butter
¼ teaspoon paprika
1 cup milk
2 teaspoons prepared mustard
Break macaroni in short lengths, cover with boiling salted water, and cook until soft (25-30 minutes). Drain thoroughly, and place layers of the macaroni, grated cheese, salt and pepper in a baking dish. Dot with butter. Garnish with paprika. Mix the milk and prepared mustard together and pour over the macaroni. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) about one-half hour.

Baked Eggs in Ham Nests.

Baked or boiled ham
Eggs
English muffins
American cheese (grated)
Line custard cups with thin slices of baked or boiled ham. Drop a raw egg into each cup, and bake them in a moderate oven, 325 degrees Fahrenheit, 15 to 20 minutes, or until the eggs are done.
Split the muffins, toast them, then sprinkle each half generously with grated cheese. Return to a moderate oven, 325 degrees Fahrenheit, to melt the cheese. Remove the egg and ham nests from the custard cups and place one on each muffin half. Serve immediately.

Cheese Souffle.

(Serves 5)

1½ cups milk
1 cup soft bread crumbs
1 tablespoon butter
½ pound American cheese (sliced thin)
4 eggs (separated)
¼ teaspoon paprika
2 drops tabasco sauce

Appropriate Draperies

Linen, chintz and homespun draperies are appropriate in a colonial room, such as early American bedrooms where poster beds, patchwork quilts, hand-hooked rugs and roomy mahogany highboys furnish charm. Rooms furnished after the Southern colonial manner in lovely Chippendale, Sheraton or Heppelwhite pieces need find damask or satin draperies and upholstery.

Scratched Furniture

If furniture becomes scratched take a small paint brush, dip it into iodine and paint the place marred. When dry, polish with any good furniture polish.

JEROBOAM: A MAN WITH A GREAT OPPORTUNITY

LESSON TEXT—1 Kings 11:26-31, 37-40.
GOLDEN TEXT—In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths.—Proverbs 3:6.

Strength of personality apart from good character will not assure success but will, on the other hand, cause only intensified failure and disaster. We may even add divine promises of blessing which are given on condition of right living, and the man of courage and strength without good moral or spiritual character will only dissipate both promise and power and will become what is even worse than a failure—a bad example and a leader of wickedness.

I. Opportunity and Treachery (vv. 26-28).

Opportunity misused may become a curse, but that is the result when a man takes what might be a blessing and turns it into a blight. The life of Jeroboam is a warning against such sinfulness and at the same time it offers us an occasion to encourage young people to make the most of their opportunities for the glory of God.

That which commended Jeroboam to Solomon was that he was a man of courage and industry (v. 28). That combination will carry a man or woman to unlimited heights. The world is so full of timid and lazy folk, that the one who has a heart of valor and a willingness to work hard stands out in bold relief. Every sensible employer knows that fact and is quick to lay hold of and advance such an individual. Times are hard and work is scarce, but opportunity still knocks at the door of the boy or girl, man or woman who is brave and diligent.

The sad thing was that there was treachery in the heart of Jeroboam. Had he been willing to wait God's time he would have received all that he did ultimately receive and more, but his strength of personality did not include good character, and he at once began to plot against the king who had given him his chance to develop and advance. Let us teach our young people to be loyal and true, as well as to be brave and ambitious.

II. Promise and Condition (vv. 29-31, 37-39).

God had reached the end of His patience with Solomon. He who had begun on his knees in the house of God, seeking wisdom that he might rule his people aright, had come to the end of his life in apostasy and in wicked indulgence of the wishes of his heathen wives. Through His prophet Ahijah, God made known the purpose to divide the kingdom into ten tribes and two—a separation which knew no reunion while Israel was in the land.

Jeroboam was promised the ten tribes with the assurance of the great blessing which had been given to David, but this was definitely on the condition that he would "hearken—walk—do—keep" (v. 38) God's statutes. The fact that he failed only emphasizes the folly and wickedness of the man, for he went on his way to destruction in spite of opportunity and blessing. Men are doing the same thing today. Oh, that we who teach this lesson might be enabled to stop some such prodigal on this coming Lord's Day.

III. Danger and Exile (v. 40).

Although Jeroboam in accordance with God's promise did ultimately come to his throne, it was by way of danger and a flight into Egypt. Solomon determined to destroy him and Jeroboam had to flee into exile. If he had gone God's way to the throne and had abided God's time, he might have spared himself both danger and exile in a heathen land.

Perchance some one who reads these lines is just now languishing in the exile of an Egypt of despair because he has failed to obey God. To such a one we say, do not follow Jeroboam who went from exile into greater sin and sorrow. Turn back now, seek God in confession and contrition, and if need be, in salvation. Get back to God's way and enjoy His blessing.

In making application of the lessons learned from the life of Jeroboam, let us not fail to point out that all down through the historical records he is referred to repeatedly as the man "who made Israel to sin." "Jeroboam's sins were not the sins of a common man. It is only kings, and kings' counselors, and popes, and bishops, and ministers, and elders, and such like, who can sin and make nations and churches and congregations to sin. But they can do it. And they are doing it every day. The commonest and meanest man among us has more than enough of this terrible power of both sinning himself and making other men to sin" (Alexander Whyte).

To Be Saved

When a man is saved he is saved from something that does him harm. But that isn't all. He is saved to something that is good for him and everybody he comes in contact with.

Meat and Drink

By OSCAR EKLUND

(Released by Associated Newspapers WNU Service.)

LUCIA simply couldn't resist the temptation to stand for a while before the gorgeously decorated windows of the building which she had been in such haste to reach. She had boarded the 7:30 downtown car in order to be among the first to enter the doors, yet here she stood transfixed as usual by the beauty displayed in the windows. Standing in bold relief was an old Chinese vase; Lucia knew nothing of its value—that its reign mark showed it to be a genuine Ming—but she did know that its old green enamel against that background of dark blue drapery was a thing of beauty which satisfied some need within her. A jolly, fat, round pewter bowl, of which she was particularly fond, was still there, and a duck of an old tea-caddy with brass handles and an ivory knob; some wonderful goblets—Jacobite had she but known it—a pink luster tea-set and an old sampler with exquisite stitchery. How she loved them all! She had formed the habit of coming to these windows every time she had occasion to visit this downtown section.

Time had flown faster than she realized and so it was that upon reaching the offices of the building she found five men ahead of her. The switchboard operator nodded to them one by one to enter a door marked "Private." While Lucia waited each one of the five came out of the inner room within five minutes of his entrance.

"He wants a man," the girl at the switchboard told her when she asked to see the manager about the position advertised.

"I know, but you see I'm going to try to persuade him that I'm just the person he needs," said Lucia with the friendly, confidential manner that had won her friends ever since she was three years old. "That is," she coaxed, "if you'll only let me see him."

The girl seemed appreciative if dubious. She motioned for Lucia to enter the private office, however, saying, "Good luck to you, dearie, but take it from me, he's no easy mark."

"I came to see about your ad," began Lucia, "for a salesperson in your art shop."

"How did you get in here?" barked a voice from behind a big desk. "I advertised for a man and that—that girl at the board knows it. She's paid to keep people out of here and this is the way she does it." The voice had grown more and more irritable as Lucia made no move toward the door.

"But you really don't know how badly I want to work for you and I thought perhaps if I made you understand you'd let me try."

"Work for me? Why for me any more than for someone else, I'd like to know? I never hire women when I can help it. They can't appreciate things that they don't own."

"Oh, but I do," cried Lucia. "I love your shop," she went on passionately. "Your windows have been just—just—meat and drink to me."

If nothing else Lucia had captured the attention of the manager and owner of the famous art shop.

"What do you mean, 'meat and drink'?" he asked curiously.

"Did you ever," inquired Lucia, "live in one little back room, with horrible red and green and yellow paper on the walls and with battered golden oak furniture and a view from the window of back stairways, milk bottles and grayish-white washings on clothes lines that are worked by pulleys?"

"That's why your windows are meat and drink to me. I love the soft colors of the draperies and the pottery. Of course I don't know the names of the old china and the beautiful glassware, but I could learn them quickly—really I could. There are art books there in the library and I could read them at night."

Lucia was breathless with emotion.

"How old are you?" he asked abruptly.

"Nineteen," said Lucia, her cheeks growing redder and her eyes brighter.

"You don't look it," said he meditatively. "It's the short hair and short skirts, I suppose. By the way, what makes you think you could suit me? I've a reputation of being a hard man to work for."

Lucia smiled in her friendly fashion.

"I've always felt that you must love your beautiful things in just the same way that I do," she said eagerly, "and people who love the same things always get along well together."

"If you really mean all that you've said—" he began.

"Oh, I do mean every word of it," interrupted Lucia fervently. "I—I think I've been starved for beautiful things."

"I can use you," was the terse reply.

"I did it," whispered Lucia joyously as she passed the friendly switchboard operator.

While sitting idly at the big desk the bachelor proprietor of the art shop was thinking that of all the women he had ever met in the 34 years of his life Lucia, who had sought meat and drink in his windows, would make the ideal companion for his wanderings in far-off lands in search for the beauty that he loved.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

EVERY efficient kitchen has a book shelf. The paper back booklets that all homemakers love to collect may be placed in bright oil cloth folders so that they will make a brave show along with the bound cook books.

The prettiest folders of this sort that I have seen were made in green and yellow to match the kitchen color scheme. The diagrams given here show exactly how they were made. It is generally best to sort the booklets according to subjects rather than size.

The folders are stiffened with cardboard so they hold booklets of different sizes neatly. The cardboard should be cut the size of the largest booklet in the group. The fabric side of both pieces of oil cloth should be entirely covered with paste to make it stick smoothly to the cardboard. Letter or write the general subject of the booklets on a label and paste it on the back. Place the folder flat under something heavy until it is dry.

NOTE: Book 1—SEWING, for the Home Decorator, and No. 2, Gifts, Novelties, and Embroideries, are now 15 cents each, or both books for 25 cents. Readers who have not secured their copies of these two books should send in their orders at once, as no more copies will be available when the present stock is sold. Your choice of the QUILT LEAFLET illustrating 36 authentic patchwork stitches; or the RAG RUG LEAFLET, will be included with orders for both books for the present, but the offer may be withdrawn at any time. Leaflets are 6 cents each when ordered without books.

Everyone should have copies of these two books containing 96 HOW TO SEW articles by Mrs. Spears, that have not appeared in the paper. Send your order at once to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

ORLAND TO WEED OUT OBSOLETE ORDINANCES

Trustee Stewart Loebe has asked that the Ordinance Committee meet for the purpose of going over the Village Ordinances picking out those now in effect and disregarding those repealed or obsolete. He pointed out to the Board that it was almost impossible for people in the Village to know what ordinances are now in effect since it was doubtful if the Board members themselves could tell.

In the early days of the village—back when John Humphrey was mayor, it was the custom to record the ordinances with the County recorder and this practice preserved their contents from one Board to the next. In later years, however, the ordinances have been kept by the Clerk and as this position changed hands many valuable papers became lost. Mrs. Cooper, the present clerk, has a complete indexed file of all ordinances and resolutions passed since she was elected to office; however, as to what was passed before is more or less of a mystery. The Ordinance committee consists of Stewart Loebe, Harry Heiting, and John Schmadeke.

JOLIET PCA REPORTS 42 PERCENT INCREASE IN LOANS FOR THE FIRST SIX MONTHS.

Loans to farmer-members of the Joliet Production Credit Association increased 42 per cent during the first six months of this year, as compared with the same period of 1938, according to Ward L. Edwards, secretary-treasurer of the association. From January 1 to June 30, 1939, the association disbursed $312,240, to its members as compared with $219,940 disbursed during the first 6 months of 1938. The association's 617 members are located in Will, Grundy, Kendall and Kankakee counties.

"There are several reasons for this outstanding increase in volume," says Mr. Edwards. "The association's program of bringing its credit service to each community by establishing field offices or local representatives in counties other than the one where the central office is located has been a great convenience to members and a big boon to business. These local representatives with authority to represent the association in most of its operations have made it convenient for farmers to obtain production credit association loans."

"Another major reason is the growing familiarity of farmers with production credit association loans and the cooperative nature of the association."

"It is estimated, too, that farmers are making wider use of the 9- to 12-month budget type of loan developed by the production credit associations because of its adaptability to the special needs of agriculture."

Field representatives for the Joliet Production Credit Association for Will county are: Carlton Steigle, Plainfield; Tony Messman, Joliet and Chas. Erickson, Mokena.
